SALES MEETING

BETTER SALES MEETINGS

- Our company should have a sales meeting every morning before we start the day.
- Often, sales meetings have been repetitious and boring, which was reflected in the attitudes of our sales force.

- If our sales meetings are enthusiastic and uplifting, our salespeople will carry that same attitude with them when they talk to prospective clients.

- We cannot afford to have salespeople who are unmotivated.

WHAT SHOULD BE INCLUDED?

- An objective that summarizes the challenge.
- A mini-lecture that provides a reference and an introduction to the exercise.

REDEFINING SALES

- Provide different ideas and approaches that will differentiate us from our competition and help us create value for our clients.

- Minimize the stress felt by the salesperson and also reduce the pressure felt by the client leading to more profitable business relationships.

MOTIVATION

Motivation is a big part of sales. Salespeople need a strategy that they believe in, the tools to carry it out, and the tactical training to apply those tools.

OUTCOMES

- While being entertained, our sales force will be well educated on company goals, policy, plans, and sales techniques.
- They will be fired-up and actively involved.
